ELECTION DATE TO-DAY?

BY OUR POLITICAL CORRESPONDENT.

IT is probable that the Taoiseach may inform the Dail to-day before the House rises the exact date on which it is proposed to hold the general election. Unless something entirely unexpected arises, to-day's sitting will be the last in which sitting deputies will be asked to take part.

It is learned that at least five members of the Fianna Fail Party with seats in the present Dail will not be official candidates at the coming election.

Up to date the Labour Party has approved of the candidature of 72 candidates, and there are still a few constituencies to be considered. The National Council of the Party had a long meeting at Leinster House yesterday, when various matters were under consideration. It was stated unofficially that the name of Mr. James Larkin was before the Council for approval as a party candidate for Dublin, N.E., but that it was rejected by a narrow majority. There was, however, no reference to this in the official memorandum issued after the meeting. Mr. Luke Duffy, the General Secretary, when questioned on the subject afterwards, declined to make any statement.

Labour candidates approved at yesterday's meeting included the following:—

Clare—Senator P. Hogan and Mr. J. P. Hughes.

Mayo, N.—Mr. Martin McGrath, Chairman, Ballina U.C.

Galway, W.—Mr. B. Keane and Mr. M. O Maolain, T.C.

Donegal, W.—Mr. D. C. O'Boyle and Mr. Joseph O'Doherty.

Monaghan—Mr. M. P. Linehan, Treasurer, I.N.T.O.

Mr. Seamus O'Farrell has been appointed National Director of Elections for the Labour Party.

Warships at Gibraltar, Says Berlin

THE battleships Nelson and King George V., the aircraft carriers Formidable and Furious, and some destroyers are now in Gibraltar harbour, German radio said last night.

Several transports and merchant ships are also reported in the harbour.

"Two of these transports," added the announcer, "are British, and apparently have troops on board destined for Africa."—(Reuter.)

Russia Got Most Lease-Lend Equipment

Accounting for 11,102,472,000 dollars worth of Lend-Lease aid in little more than two years, President Roosevelt disclosed yesterday that more actual fighting equipment had been sent to the U.S.S.R. than to any other country.

The President told Congress in a letter that up to, and including, March 31, Russia received 1,041,000,000 dollars worth of 'planes, tanks, motor vehicles, ammunition, ordnance and watercraft. "To-day," he said in the letter, "we are outbuilding the aggressors in every category of modern arms,

Eire's Exports Down

The exports from Eire in April were valued at £1,985,406, the lowest figure recorded since August of last year. Imports in the same month amounted to £2,168,427. The total trade, therefore, was £4,153,831. Imports exceeded exports by £183,023.

As compared with April of last year, there was a substantial fall in the value of live animals exported, as well as food, drink, and tobacco, and other raw materials and manufactured goods. There was a small increase in exports by parcels post at £36,061.

Mr. Churchill Says "The Tide of War Has Turned"

MR. WINSTON CHURCHILL, speaking at a White House Press conference last night, said it was indisputable that the tide of war had turned.

Stating that he was depending on force of arms to bring an Allied victory, he said:—"Greater Allied superiority in manufactures will, so far as the air war is concerned, be decisive. We are the stronger animal and will not give our enemies surcease. Particularly is this the case in the air."

Growing Air Might

Mr. Churchill, taking over the Presidential Press Conference, covered all phases of the world conflict, and emphasised that he was depending on force of arms to bring victory rather than any internal collapse of the Axis.

He said the war would be waged with equal force on both fronts if it continued long enough. The growing might of the Allied war machine would be cast increasingly against the Axis on every front. Production superiority would be utilised to the last ounce.

"A CERTAIN PERIOD"

He said the Allies would follow the principle that all their elements must be engaged on the widest possible front. The Allies were "the stronger animal," and would not give the Axis surcease. Particularly was this the case in the air.

Superiority of production would be a telling factor. By the end of a certain period the Allies would have achieved a great superiority in the number of manufactures, especially 'planes, which, so far as the air war was concerned, would be decisive.

Mr. Churchill, who was particularly cheerful, and was smoking a cigar, had questions thrown at him from every side. He answered them jovially, adroitly parrying indiscreet questions.

"What of the Japanese threat to Australia?" he was asked. "It appears to be less serious than it was when I saw you last in this room," he said, adding that British and American leaders had arrived at good conclusions for prosecuting the war in the Pacific with the greatest vigour.

Their plans were to wage war until unconditional surrender was procured from all who had molested them. This applied equally to Europe and Asia.

Mr. Roosevelt interrupted here to say that the word "molest" was a happy example of British understatement.

RUSSIA AND JAPAN

When the talk turned to the Russian front, Mr. Churchill said that he had the utmost confidence in Russia's ability to hold out this year, and that she would be able to hurl back any attacks. They knew that the Japanese were watching them with a fairly opportunist eye.

Italy, he said, should be a softer proposition than Germany. He thought Italy would be very well advised to throw herself on the justice of those whom she had so greatly offended.

He added that all the Allies could do was to apply physical stimuli—and he intimated that he meant continued bombings. While he said that it seemed to be a good idea to give a 24 hours service of bombing raids on the Continent, the Prime Minister made it clear that he had no thought that other methods of forcing the foe into submission should be neglected in the meantime.—(Reuter.)

ALLIED CHIEFS NOT CHOSEN

MR. CHURCHILL said that he and Mr. Roosevelt had not yet selected the Allied commanders for the European theatres of war.

Mr. Roosevelt said his talks with the Premier were still going on.

Mussolini Confers With His Party Chiefs

SIGNOR MUSSOLINI, it was disclosed yesterday by Rome radio, has held a conference with Fascist Party chiefs in Rome.

The radio added that the Duce issued instructions, of which, however, no details were given. Those present included Signor Scorza, party secretary, and members of the provincial committee of the Fascist Party in Rome province and the local party committee of Rome City.

All workers in war factories and military works in Sicily, Sardinia and adjacent islands are to be subject to military discipline, an Italian decree announced yesterday. Students are being offered their degrees at any other Italian university in an attempt to clear the island of all non-essential personnel.

Because of its central position, Sardinia, says Reuter, is undoubtedly the most important focal point for both the defence or assault of Italy. Fighter cover would be available to bombers operating from its airfields. If Corsica were similarly occupied, the whole industrial north of Italy would be vulnerable to attack.

The Rome Messagero stated yesterday that the war has now entered a new and hard phase for Italy. "In this new phase," it asserted, "the a.-a. defences have been considerably reinforced, as was shown last week by the destruction of 100 enemy 'planes."

Italian workers in Germany are being repatriated. Stating that the first contingent of Italians has already left Kiel, Kieler Zeitung writes that "the total mobilisation of German labour and the intensified use of war prisoners made possible the liberation of Italian labour for more important tasks on the home front."

Jean Paquis, Paris Radio commentator, discussing Allied invasion plans, last night said that "after the Allied victory in North Africa the Axis must expect this summer a co-ordinated attack in the west and in the east.

"The Allies have massed one and a half million men in Britain, and another one and a half million in North Africa. In addition, they have three armies in the Middle East."

Claiming that the Axis is well armed for any Allied landing, Paquis declared: "If the Allies land at 20 different points along the European coast, they will find it difficult to destroy the Axis armies at once owing to the supply difficulties. The Axis has millions of men at its disposal."

£1,000,000,000 War Credit

During consideration of a supplementary vote of credit of a thousand million pounds for the British war effort, which was agreed to, Sir Kingsley Wood yesterday told the House of Commons that the new Mutual Aid Act of the Canadian Government went far beyond even the generous gift of one thousand million dollars which Canada gave to Britain last year, and represented acceptance by Canada of new financial liabilities of a very large order.

"Expenditure in the past seven or eight weeks," he said, "has been about thirteen and a half millions a day, of which eleven and a half millions a day has been on the fighting and supply services. Lest anyone should be tempted, despite the temporary factors mentioned, to look upon this as reflecting some slackening in our war effort, let me remind them that the total vote of credit expenditure for which I have budgeted in the present financial year is £4,900 millions." This year's vote of credit, he added, reflected substantially larger provision for the war than last year's.

Better Supply of Potatoes Yesterday

While the scarcity of potatoes still is being felt in Dublin, yesterday's market brought greater supplies, there being about twenty tons of new potatoes on offer. There was a brisk trade at 6d. per lb., and all stocks were sold.

A salesman stated that everyone in the market who wanted potatoes was able to get them at 6d., and they were retailed in the city at 9d. It is anticipated that the flow of new potatoes within the next week will considerably ease the position.

Future of St. Anne's Mansion?

The spacious and artistically-appointed mansion, St. Anne's, Clontarf, may be converted into a sanatorium, convalescent home, or holiday home for poor children. It has been vacant for some time.

At the next monthly meeting of the Dublin Corporation Mr. J. Breen will move a motion suggesting that the City Manager be asked to state if he has any plans regarding the future use of the mansion and if he had considered its suitability for any of the above-mentioned purposes.

ALLIES CONTINUE BIG AIR ATTACKS

Sardinia, where, it was disclosed by Berlin Radio on Monday, German troops are now manning the defences, has been heavily attacked by big Allied air forces.

Three hundred 'planes, including heavy and medium bombers and fighters attacked airfields and ports and machine-gunned many other targets.

Pantellaria was also attacked.

Included in the nine major targets on these two islands, says Reuter's Special Correspondent at Allied Headquarters, North Africa, were: the big Italian naval base of La Maddelena, off Sardinia's north-eastern corner, where the causeway linking the naval base and the adjacent Caprera Island was severely damaged; harbour installations and shipping at Terra Nova, on the north-east Sardinian coast; at Arbatax, on the east coast, and at Carlo Forte, in the south-west.

An ammunition dump was hit, and fires started were seen fifty miles away.

Rome radio stated last night, says Reuter, that heavy Allied raids on Cagliari, Sardinia's capital, have caused the city districts proper to be abandoned. The authority quoted for this was a special correspondent just returned to Italy from the island. He stated that when, during the first raid, on February 17, streets in the centre of the city were hit, the inhabitants took refuge in the outskirts, but these in their turn were attacked on May 17.

Twelve Dead in English Raid

Twelve persons are known to have been killed in the course of an air raid on an English south coast town yesterday afternoon. Although the raiders, believed to number 25, were quickly driven off by anti-aircraft fire, a group of small shops was wrecked and working-class houses were demolished.

The raiders were Focke-Wulf fighter-bombers, with fighter escort. Four of their number were destroyed, two being brought down into the sea.

37,000 Homeless at Dortmund

Radio reports from Germany yesterday state that 37,000 homeless out of a population of over 542,000 have left Dortmund following the R.A.F.'s raid in the early hours of Monday morning.

The Swedish Aftonbladet reports from Berlin that the Todt organisation is to start work immediately on repairing the Mohne and Eder dams breached by the R.A.F. last week.—(Reuter.)

Chapel Royal to be a Military Church

THE Chapel Royal, Dublin Castle, is to be opened as a military church, and the first garrison Mass will be celebrated there on Whit Sunday next.

Built a hundred and fifty years ago, the Chapel Royal replaced Christ Church Cathedral as the place of worship of the Viceroys. Among those who had been chaplains to the Lords Lieutenant were the Right Rev. Dr. Patton, Bishop of Killaloe (whose death occurred a few weeks ago) and the present Dean of Christ Church Cathedral (the Very Rev. E. H. Lewis-Crosby). The organists of Christ Church Cathedral and of St. Patrick's Cathedral also acted as organists in the chapel.

At the inception of the Irish Free State the Chapel Royal ceased to have any connection with the Church of Ireland, and Communion vessels and some furniture were returned to the Church. "When Mr. de Valera came into power it is stated that he gave orders that it should be kept in good repair.

The old chapel, being in a ruinous condition, was taken down in 1807, when the Duke of Bedford was Viceroy, and he laid the first stone of the present building. The chapel was finished in seven years at a cost of £43,000, and was opened for Divine Service on Christmas Day, 1814. The Earl of Whitworth then was Lord Lieutenant.

The architect was Francis Johnston, the architect of St. George's Church and of the General Post Office. The chapel was built in black stone in the new Gothic style, and is decorated with a great number of heads. Outside there are ninety carved heads of Tullamore marble. At the entrance on the north side there is a bust of St. Peter, and above it, over the window, is a figure of the head of Dean Swift. At the east entrance there are busts of St. Patrick, Brian Boru and the Virgin Mary.

The stone carving was done in part by Edward Smyth, who died before it was completed, the rest being done by his son, John.

RICH INTERIOR

The interior of the chapel is very elaborate. There is a fine oak carved pulpit, and the reading desk and the galleries are richly carved. The carving was by Stewart and the stucco work by George Stapleton.

There is some fine stained glass, including a panel of 15th century glass, given by Lord Whitworth. The other stained glass is Irish, 19th century, and is heraldic, incorporating the coats of arms of the Lords Lieutenant. It is a curious coincidence that the only remaining window space was filled by the coat of arms of the last Lord Lieutenant, the window being the work of Miss Purcell.

The Chapel Royal was attended by members of the public as well as by the Viceroys. On being taken over by the Free State, however, it remained closed as a place of worship. For a time it was used as a Record Office, and subsequently portion of it was utilised for a while as a Circuit Court.

The last three Deans of the Chapel Royal were—in succession—the Very Rev. Dean Charles Hercules Dickenson, D.D., Vicar of St. Ann's; the Very Rev. Dean Godfrey Webster, M.A., and the Very Rev. Dean Charles O'Hara Mease, M.A., Rector of Castleknock. At the time of the change-over, when the British Government left this country, the Very Rev. Charles O'Hara Mease was Dean, with the present Dean of St. Patrick's Cathedral, the Very Rev. David F. R. Wilson, M.A., as Chaplain.

HOW CLOTH ORDER OPERATES

AFTER June 14 maximum prices for drapery and textile goods to the public will be fixed indirectly by the operation of the Emergency Powers (Cloth and Clothing) (Maximum Prices) Order, 1943, details of which were officially released last night.

The new Order covers virtually every type of cloth and clothing, and sets out the margins of profit available to traders. Beyond stabilising prices of non-luxury goods at a certain peak, it effects no change in the customary business rates as between wholesaler and retailer.

In the early stages of its operation, the scheme will impose new burdens on manufacturers, who will be obliged to brand all goods with the appropriate prices. Discounts in the trade are clamped to the rates obtaining last year, and those allowed wholesalers' margins last year will continue to receive them, but otherwise no person can benefit from them after the operation of the scheme. Wholesale and retail marginal prices of any articles, in respect of which separate lots are purchased at different prices, will be determined either by reference to the cost of the particular lot from which the controlled article is taken for sale, or by reference to the average cost of all the lots. Drapery firms will be required to produce at any time at the request of an authorised officer books and documents relating to the importation, acquisition, or disposal of any article in their possession and to give any information reasonably required.

PRICE AND PROFIT

Taking piece goods as an example, the scheme will operate in such manner that, where the hypothetical retail price does not exceed 25s. 9d. per yard, the wholesaler's margin, as percentage of the manufacturer's price, will be 22.5, while the retailer's margin will be 50 per cent. Thus, on a man's overcoat, the wholesaler will get a peak margin of 25 per cent. profit, and the retailer, where the hypothetical retail price does not exceed £4 10s., will receive at most 33 1-3 per cent., and, where it exceeds £4 10s., 50 per cent. If the overcoat is in the luxury class and costs more than 10 guineas, then the schedule ceases to operate, and the retailer is at liberty to exceed the maximum price rate.

Similarly with a suit, where the hypothetical retail price does not exceed £5, the wholesaler's margin is 20 per cent., and above that price it may range between 21 and 25 per cent., and the retailer's margin, where the hypothetical price does not exceed £4 10s., is 33 1-3 per cent., and above that price it is 50 per cent. If, however, the suit costs 10 guineas, the maximum does not apply.

Irish drapers are working overtime to comply with the regulations imposed by the new Order dealing with the distribution of textile goods, an Irish Times reporter was told yesterday, when he approached members of the trade for the reason why applications for registration under the Order were being sent so slowly to the Department of Supplies.

"SEVERE STRAIN"

"You have no idea of the work involved in making application," a well-known trader said. "We have had two men working specially on the job since the Order came out, and I know that other firms in the city have auditors at work on it. In order to comply with the requirements, we have to go through all the invoices for a year and fill up a very detailed form. Far from being merely a matter of formally applying for registration, it imposes a very severe strain on the staffs of drapery firms, involving what amounts to stocktaking for the past year. It is a job for experts, who have to go through a mass of details relating to different classes of goods."

Northern Ireland Enlistments

Sir Basil Brooke, Prime Minister, stated in the Northern Ireland House of Commons yesterday that since the outbreak of war 27,600 men and 5,000 women whose homes are in the six counties had enlisted. These totals took no account of men from Northern Ireland who had joined the forces in Britain, or of Northern Ireland men who were in the forces and the Mercantile Marine before the war.

Keeper with Shotgun Guarded Sir Basil Brooke's Son

SIR BASIL BROOKE, Prime Minister of Northern Ireland, told in the Northern Ireland House of Commons yesterday "of a plot to kidnap his three-year-old son Julian during the trouble of 1922."

He was refuting remarks by Mr. T. J. Campbell, K.C. (Nationalist, Central Belfast), who had quoted speeches Sir Basil made about that time—"unchristian utterances which he had never recalled."

Mr. Campbell, speaking on the Cabinet estimates, asked whether the Prime Minister deserved the vote for utterances he had made in the past. Did he deserve it for saying in 1933: "How many in the audience employ Catholics; I have not one about my place," or for saying in 1934: "Do not employ Catholics who are 99 per cent. disloyal."

Sir Basil replied: "When I was Commandant of the Special Constabulary in Co. Fermanagh I was informed, and accurately, that the Roman Catholics whom I employed as my home—and at that time I roughly divided the employment 50-50—were to be used for the kidnapping of my eldest son.

"They were too cowardly to attack me, too cowardly to shoot me, though they threatened me; but in order to force my hand they were going to use men in my employment in order to kidnap my boy."

Mr. Campbell—Do you really believe that—

FACTS NOT DENIED

"I certainly do," said Sir Basil. "Perhaps Mr. Campbell will carry his mind to the time when 40 loyalists were kidnapped and carried off over the border. Surely, if Mr. Campbell had been placed in the same position as I was, when my boy was not allowed outside our home, and when a keeper accompanied him with a shotgun about the place, he, a kindly man, would have taken the same precautions as I did, and would have got rid of every man who was thought to be implicated in the plot.

"Those facts have never been denied for ten years."

At the close of the debate Mr. Campbell said there might or there might not have been such a plot. It might have been a weak invention by some enemy to get rid of Roman Catholic workers. He thought that the Prime Minister's belief that there was a plot was a bona fide one. If there was confirmation of such a plot it was his right as a father to take every precaution for the safety of his son.

But, even if there was a plot, was it right, many years afterwards, to preach against the whole Roman Catholic people? The Prime Minister had offered no apology for what he had said.

Lieut. Julian Brooke, Sir Basil's son, was killed in action last March while serving in the Grenadier Guards.

Licensed Hours Settled

AFTER a seven-hour conference in the Department of Industry and Commerce yesterday, proposals were agreed to between representatives of the licensed trade and the Assistants' Union for a settlement of the closing hours' crux.

The proposed terms of settlement will have to come before the next meeting of the bodies concerned.

The terms of the settlement, an Irish Times reporter learned yesterday, are as follows:—

1. Assistants to work not more than two Sundays in three.

2. Hours of work on Sunday not to exceed four.

3. The working week not to consist of more than forty-eight hours.

4. In any week in which an assistant works on a Sunday he shall be entitled to a full day's holiday during the same week, and to an afternoon off, not later than 6 p.m.

5. In a week in which he does not work on Sunday, an assistant shall be entitled to a full day off and a morning off up to 3.30 p.m.

6. In consideration of the long working hours on a Sunday and the long spread-over of these working hours, junior assistants, assistants, and supervisory grades shall receive a payment for each Sunday worked, with a pro rata payment to apprentices and lounge-boys.

7. In cases in which employers desire to employ their assistants on two Sundays in three, special ad hoc arrangements may be made between the Association and the Union.

MORE BEDS NEEDED IN HOSPITALS

EMERGENCY conditions have brought about a rapid change in the psychological attitude towards hospital treatment, and, apart from the paucity of hospital beds in Dublin in latter years, are held responsible for the severe strain imposed on accommodation in the public and private hospitals in the city at present.

It will be recalled that on Monday at an Enniskerry inquest, Dr. Louis Hickey stated in evidence that he had been unable to get a bed from the Hospitals' Bureau for a critically injured girl. "In the whole of Dublin," he said, "they had no bed—a shocking thing, I think, for the City of Dublin."

The Hospitals' Commission states: "In the course of the evidence at the inquest held on the victim of Saturday's Enniskerry cycling accident, it was stated that the Dublin Hospital Bureau was requested to obtain a hospital bed for the other girl, who was seriously injured, and that the Bureau failed to do so. The latter statement is incorrect, as the Bureau obtained a bed in the Royal City of Dublin Hospital, Baggot street. The bed was not availed of subsequently, as it had been decided in the interval to retain the injured girl in St. Michael's Hospital, to which she had been brought in the first instance."

CAUSE OF PRESSURE

"Virtually all of the 2,000 beds in the general hospitals in the city are filled, and accommodation in the private nursing homes also is fully taxed," a prominent medical practitioner stated yesterday. "This," he explained, "is not due to any sudden increase in the rate of illness among the population—in recent years Dublin has begun severely to feel the need for at least another 700 beds—but to the fact that emergency conditions have broken down the old repugnance to hospital treatment. Sick people who formerly could not be forced into a hospital bed now are to be found in the wards of every public hospital in the city, because they no longer can enjoy the pre-war facilities for nursing in their own homes.

"It is not surprising," he added, "that it should be difficult to get a hospital bed on demand, but, generally speaking, there always will be beds available for very urgent cases, because the hospital authorities stretch their accommodation to meet exigencies. It is not unusual for a convalescent patient to accept temporary make-shift accommodation and surrender a bed to a serious injury case. I have never seen anything like the run on the hospitals these days."

BUREAU'S WORK

The Bed Bureau in Dublin places between 5,000 and 6,000 cases every year, and it is not possible, it was stated, to get all cases into hospital immediately. Often, when a medical bed is required, the only accommodation available is for surgical cases, and readjustments have to be made before the medical patient is admitted. The increasing difficulty of obtaining proper food, medicine and hot water in many homes, and the consequent growing hospital consciousness, is likely, it is believed, to bring the question of hospital accommodation in Dublin to a serious head.

Dublin Man's Hold-up of Bank Prevented

A clerk, Thomas Arthur Roberts, of Ovesdon avenue, South Harrow, prevented a hold-up at Martin's Bank, Hanover square, London, by grappling with the intruder and disarming him. Yesterday, Barry O'Connor (42), described as a cab-driver, was sentenced to 12 months' imprisonment for assaulting Kathleen Elizabeth Eanks, a cashier, with intent to rob her.

At the Marlborough street hearing O'Connor was described as an accountant of Mitchell street, Dublin.

It was stated that O'Connor entered the bank and produced an automatic revolver. Mr. Roberts, who was in the bank, at once closed with him.

The Recorder, Sir Gerald Dodson, said that O'Connor's conduct had been outrageous, but owing to the great pluck of Mr. Roberts he could not take anything. Requesting that Mr. Roberts, who was not in Court, should attend to-day, Sir Gerald said: "I want to see Mr. Roberts."

Industrialist Suggests State Farms

Mr. William Dwyer gave a talk to Cork Rotary Club yesterday on the future of industries in Ireland. He said the first essential for agriculture was the establishment of State farms of 2,000 or 3,000 acres, each under competent management. There farmers' sons could be sent to learn the most modern methods, while their secondary education should be based on the scientific knowledge of farming. Travelling scholarships would enable students to learn the methods of other countries. Machinery should be made available for small farmers, and both farmers and labourers should have a decent rate of pay. The entire housing programme for rural areas should be overhauled, and the amenities of country life must be improved if they were to stop the flight from the land. If they continued as at present it would mean that the industries in the cities would have fewer customers, and the result would be either emigration or starvation. They had been told that Europe would be short of food and textiles for four years after the war. Their textile and coming industries should be largely increased, and their herds built up, so that they might become the stud farm of Europe. Housing would help to solve, not only the problem of ill-health, but that of unemployment. More adequate benefits would have to be made under the National Health Insurance. There was great room for forestry development, and 25,000 men could be put into that industry. They had four million acres of unreclaimed land and a climate suitable for growing trees. Mr. Dwyer added that he had recently been told of an electrical plan where 35,000 people could be engaged in giving light, if not power, to every farmhouse and village.

Japan Gains Ground

The fall of Changyang, the 86th Chinese Army Headquarters, 18 miles south of the Yangtse port of Ichang, was admitted in last night's Chinese communiqué, said a Chungking message. Another Japanese column has crossed the river opposite Ichang, it was added, and launched a drive westward along the south bank of the Yangtse, after a heavy artillery bombardment.

The Japanese drive apparently consists of three columns.

A grand spirit

The more you know about Scotch Whisky the more certain you are that "Black & White" is a grand spirit.

"BLACK & WHITE"

It's the Scotch!

Peggy Sage NOTES

FINGERTIP HARMONY

Fashion says that finger-tips must harmonise with smart ensembles. This is an easy matter, thanks to Peggy Sage nail polish which is available in a range of exquisite shades. And you will like Peggy Sage polish because it is so easy to apply, so lustrous, and so long-wearing.

GOVERNMENT NOTICES.

BUTTER RATIONING

The General Rationing of Butter is intended to secure that sufficient creamery butter will be placed in cold store during the summer to give everyone a reasonable ration during the winter.

If you are producing your own butter or can obtain farm butter direct from a producer, do not hand in your ration card or the ration cards of the members of your family to your grocer until you are no longer able to get farmers' butter and are dependent on creamery butter. You will always be able to get your ration of creamery butter whenever you require it.

Some people are handing in their cards now, although they do not intend to purchase creamery butter during the summer. This may result in waste and have the effect of reducing the winter reserve and, therefore, everybody's ration for the winter.

SO

DON'T HAND IN YOUR CARD UNLESS AND UNTIL YOU MUST GET CREAMERY BUTTER.

If you must register with a retailer, satisfy yourself that he has the necessary licence to sell butter, as only retailers who are licensed to sell butter will get supplies for their customers.

PRIMARY CERT. EXAMINATION.

IMPORTANT NOTICE TO MEMBERS

At their meeting on Saturday, May 22nd, the Central Executive Committee unanimously adopted the following resolution:—

"Congress having decided to refuse voluntary co-operation in the implementation of the Compulsory Primary Certificate Examination, the marking of the examination papers by members of the I.N.T.O. is hereby declared to be conduct unworthy of a member, within the meaning of Rule 95 of the Rules and Constitution."

Rule 95 is as follows:—

"Any member found guilty of a breach of professional honour, or of conduct which in the opinion of two-thirds of the members of the C.E.C. is unworthy of a member of the I.N.T.O. . . . shall be liable to be expelled from the organisation or suspended from membership, or fined, or otherwise penalised as the Executive may decide."

Teachers are appointed by the Department to act as markers only when application is made beforehand for such appointment. Consequently application for, and acceptance of, the position of marker is purely voluntary, and as such is directly opposed to the Congress resolution.

By Order, T. J. O'CONNELL, General Secretary.

Fortune Telling in Cork.—At Cork yesterday, in the charge against Mrs. Edith Rowan, known as "Kalena," of alleged fortune telling by means of palmistry and cards at 6 Summerhill terrace, Cork, District Justice Sullivan said it would be difficult to say she had not offended against the amusements (Ireland) Act, 1931. He held that the Treasurer, Eamonn O hEaghill, Assistant Treasurer, Diarmuid O Dubhghaill, Assistant Secretary. An Taoiseach is President of An Ard-Chraobh.

Gaelic League Officers.—The Ard-Chraobh Gaelic League elected Richard A. Brannam Secretary for the eighth successive year. Michael O Rudaigh was elected Chairman; Seamus O Muimhigh, Treasurer; Eamonn O hEaghill, Assistant Treasurer; Diarmuid O Dubhghaill, Assistant Secretary. An Taoiseach is President of An Ard-Chraobh.

Ribbon for 1,000 Guineas

(By BIRDCATCHER.)

A FIELD of a dozen will go to the post for the 1,000 Guineas at Newmarket to-day. Ribbon has dominated the ante-post betting, and her credentials in point of breeding and performance leave nothing to be desired. It has been assumed that she has no serious rival, but the victory of Kingsway yesterday enhances the prospects of Shining Light. This filly ran Kingsway to a head at Salisbury, and, unless the Manton colt has improved abnormally, that running invests Shining Light with a great chance. I take Ribbon to win, but advise an each-way investment on Shining Light. Selections:—

Birdcatcher — 11.30, Layalpur; 12.0, Winter Sport; 12.40, Ribbon (nap), Shining Light (e.w.); 1.10, Bronze Beauty; 1.40, Seasick. Double—Ribbon and Layalpur.

Travelling Correspondent — 11.0, Majid; 11.30, Layalpur; 12.0, Moon Mistress; 12.40, Ribbon (nap); 1.10, Baherashah; 1.40, Germanicus. Double—Ribbon and Layalpur.

Miss O'N. Donnellon and Mrs. C. A. Carroll barely failed to concede the nine strokes to Miss Cunningham and Mrs. Chesson, losing on the home green by one hole, and conceding ten strokes to Mrs. and Miss Curran, Mrs. Randel and Miss Pyper brought the match to the 17th. The former Irish champion, Mrs. J. E. Fletcher, and Miss C. Meares, although giving seven and five strokes in their two matches, had easy victories, and other good wins were those of Mrs. MacCormack and Mrs. Ryan. It should be a close semi-final between the latter pair and Mrs. Fletcher and Miss Meares, and the winners likely will get through the final.

Second Round—Mrs. Kennedy (13) and Mrs. Livingston (16) beat Mrs. Lyne (19) and Mrs. Knee (24), 1 up; Miss R. Bermingham (15) and Miss K. Third Round—Mrs. Kennedy and Mrs. Livingston old Miss R. Bermingham and Miss Butler, at 19th; Mrs. M'Morrogh and Miss Barry beat Miss Cunningham and Mrs. Chesson, 4 and 3; Mrs. Fletcher and Miss Meares beat Mrs. Neary and Miss Tunney, 7 and 5; Mrs. MacCormack and Mrs. Ryan beat Mrs. Curran and Miss Curran, 5 and 4.

Semi-Finals to-day at 10.30; final at 2.30.

FOURSOME GOES TO 21ST

J. B. Carr and his new partner, J. Deighan, had to go to the 19th in their first round match with M. Hogan and R. J. Wallace in the Irish Men's Foursomes Cups at Dun Laoghaire last evening. Another long-drawn-out game was that of J. O'Reilly and S. Tierney and S. B. Jones and W. Crowley ended in favour of O'Reilly and Tierney at the 21st. The surprise of the round was the defeat of Kevin Garvey, the East of Ireland title-holder, and M. Minogue by J. J. O'Keeffe and E. A. Brewett, who won 3 and 2. The second round will be played to-morrow, at 5 o'clock.

J. B. Carr and J. Deighan (3) beat M. Hogan and R. J. Wallace (4); at 19th.

T. D. Purcell and J. Malone (2) beat M. S. McAvoy and C. W. Harrison (0)—3 and 1.

R. A. Barkley and D. Doran (7) beat J. S. Barrett and R. Murray (5)—1 up.

J. K. M. Hogan and Z. Fitzpatrick (5) beat T. A. Brindley and H. Keogh (0)—3 and 2.

F. Knott and K. Doyle (6) beat D. M. Saunders and T. L. Mulcahy (3)—2 and 1.

J. J. O'Keeffe and E. A. Brewett (4) beat K. Garvey and M. Minogue (5)—3 and 2.

H. Murphy and P. Dunne (6) beat T. F. McCarthy and C. Young (9)—6 and 4.

LEGAL APPOINTMENT

Mr. J. Desmond Kearns, LL.B., has been appointed by the Appointment Commissioners as assistant solicitor in the office of the Chief State Solicitor. Mr. Kearns, who has been practising at 29 Kildare street, Dublin, is a son of Mr. James J. Kearns, solicitor, Portumna.

The death in Paris, aged 76, of Dr. Emile Sergent, honorary professor of the medical faculty of Paris University, and a member of the French Academy of Medicine, who wrote textbooks on lung and tubercular diseases, was announced yesterday by Rome radio.—(Reuter.)

O'Sullivan Wins Irish Boxing Title

By P. D. McWEENEY.

AS anticipated, Paddy O'Sullivan won the Irish heavyweight championship from Pat Mulcahy before a big attendance at the Theatre Royal last night. With an advantage in heighth, reach and weight to the extent of two stone six pounds.—14st. 11lb. to 11st. 9lb.—there was an inevitability about the result which prevented the fight from being exciting, but it was a hard and genuine contest, with Mulcahy showing wonderful grit and pluck when facing certain defeat. To stay fifteen rounds with a boxer of O'Sullivan's calibre was an achievement of which he can be proud, even though he lost his recently-acquired title, and he even finished fighting.

Mulcahy is extremely clever in riding punches, and he saved himself a lot of punishment by his ability in this respect; yet, he took enough to knock out many a man with a bigger reputation, and it was remarkable to see him coming back and trying to attack in the last round.

O'Sullivan is rather too copy-book a fighter at the present time. He was never in the slightest danger after the first couple of rounds, and he kept a cool head, going on serenely with damaging left, heavy body punches, at close range, and an occasional right-swing with plenty of power in it; but he would surely have won well inside the distance had he been quicker to follow up his advantages. Time and again he had Mulcahy reeling on the ropes, but he seemed incapable of going in to finish it off. He is a really promising heavy-weight, so it that he seemed as fresh as paint at the end of fifteen rounds; but he does need rather more fire in his fighting. His boxing is excellent, but he would save himself a lot of trouble by "loosening up" at the right time.

With his only chance being an early knock-out, Mulcahy went after his opponent hard for the first four rounds, but he could never land a really telling swing, and O'Sullivan was always pushing on that left lead. From the fifth onwards the fight began to swing in O'Sullivan's favour, and on several occasions between the fifth and tenth rounds he looked like finishing Mulcahy at his mercy; but the latter never went down, and his occasional attacks took him out of danger on several occasions. A good winner and a plucky loser sums up the fight.

ARMOUR BEATEN

The Northern Ireland welter-weight champion, Tommy Armour, was beaten on points by another Belfast man, Patsy Quinn, who made a remarkable recovery after being down for a count of nine in the first round. A southpaw with a fierce left hook to the body, Armour has little or no use of his right, and he tired surprisingly from the fifth round onwards. Up till then he had done nearly all the scoring, and Quinn shipped a number of damaging body punches, but he never seemed shaken after the first round, and as the fight progressed he gained in confidence and aggression. In the last three rounds he did all the attacking, Armour occasionally scoring with a counter, but the champion was very shaken in the closing minutes of Quinn's rights to the face. The decision in Quinn's favour was popular, but somewhat fortunate after the long lead that his opponent had built up.

Holding a considerable advantage in weight, Sean Clancy opened the proceedings with a points win over Eddie Chandler in eight rather featureless rounds. Clancy was too clever in defence for Chandler's wild swings, but his own attack was not impressive, and there was a good deal of scrambling work at close range. In the long-range fighting Clancy was the more accurate and built up a comfortable lead in the early stages. Later on he appeared to tire, and Chandler punished him fairly severely in the face, but Clancy was never in trouble and was an easy winner at the end.

For crisp, fast punching, with plenty of steam in it, too, the fight of the night was the light-weight between Jimmy Smith and Terry McStravick, the best man at the weight in the North. With his lightning left hooks to the body, McStravick had an effective counter to Smith's attacks, and in round after round there was nothing between them. In the last round Smith tried to swap punches with the Belfast man, and lost out badly in that effort. That possibly, swung the verdict in McStravick's favour after a really good fight.

Middle-weight (8 rounds)—Gerry Killcullen (Dublin) beat Matt Locke (Belfast) on points.

Phœnix Defeat Leinster

The first round match between Leinster and Phœnix, in the Leinster Senior Cup, ended in a victory for Phœnix by two wickets, at Rathmines yesterday. The Leinster innings closed for 71, Boucher taking seven wickets for 17.

Phœnix had a hard struggle, but G. J. Quinn, coming on at the fall of the second wicket, saved the side, and he was out when only a couple of runs were required. W. Hodgson and McClelland shared the wickets, and C. R. Cuffe's wicket-keeping was exceptionally good. Score:—

Arbitration in Civil Service

Another effort is to be made by the Civil Service Alliance to prevail on the Government to set up arbitration machinery to deal with the cost of living issue. This decision was taken at the annual council meeting of the Alliance, when many delegates referred to the abnormal rise in the cost of living figure, which had now reached the highest peak of the last war. The Council were of opinion that, apart from the necessity for the application of arbitration generally in the service, the cost of living bonus question should be dealt with immediately by ad hoc arbitration. The elections for the Executive Committee resulted as follows:—Messrs. M. Meade (President), D. O Conaill (Secretary), S. O hEidhricseoil (Treasurer), J. O'Loughlin, J. Batt, J. J. McCarthy and M. Lonergan.

Fatal Ambulance Accident

District Justice Mangan, Dublin, yesterday dismissed two summonses, one alleging dangerous driving and one driving without due consideration on May 5 at D'Olier street, against James Hendrick, Hardwicke street, Dublin, a Dublin Corporation fireman.

It was stated that an ambulance driven by Hendrick struck a man, who subsequently died.

The defendant said that he kept blowing the horn as he drove into D'Olier street. The man was crossing diagonally and had reached the air raid shelter—he was actually inside it—and when witness was about to pass him he turned on his heel and came back. Had he stayed at the shelter for a second or two witness would have passed him, but there was absolutely nothing he could do to avoid him, except to apply the brakes and spin the wheels, which he did immediately.

Twin Babies Die From Malnutrition

Dr. D. A. MacErlean, Dublin Coroner, returned a verdict of death from debility and malnutrition at an inquest on two four-months' old twin sisters, Mary and Frances Burke, 47 Pearse House, Pearse street, Dublin, who died within three hours of each other on Saturday evening. Mary died at St. Ultan's Hospital and Frances died at St. Kevin's Hospital.

Dr. Frances Brill, house surgeon, St. Ultan's Hospital, said that Mary was admitted to the hospital at 12 noon on Saturday, and, despite treatment, she died at 6.30 that evening. She was extremely emaciated and suffered from malnutrition. She weighed 5 lbs. and 5 ozs. The child's organs were quite healthy.

Dr. F. C. McAteer, R.M.S., St. Kevin's Hospital, said that Frances Burke was admitted to St. Kevin's at 1 p.m. on Saturday. She died two hours later. She was extremely emaciated.

Mrs. Margaret Burke, mother of the children, said that the twins were born in Holles Street Hospital on January 1 last. They were a month premature, and were detained in hospital seven weeks. She fed them regularly every three hours, and they had never been sick before Thursday, May 20. Her husband, she said, was working in England.

Dr. MacErlean, in giving his verdict, added that it was very hard to reconcile the children's condition with the statement of the mother that they were properly fed. There was no trace of food in their bodies.

Mallow Men Sentenced By Special Court

Oliver Murphy, 8 Plunkett street, Mallow, pleaded guilty before the Special Criminal Court yesterday to possession of incriminating documents, and was sentenced to three months' imprisonment, not to be enforced if he entered into bail to keep the peace for two years.

William O'Sullivan, Mill street, Mallow, was sent to prison for six months when he pleaded guilty to membership of an illegal organisation and possession of incriminating documents. O'Sullivan refused to give any undertaking to the Court.

Towels from G.N.R. Wagon

Two young men—Christopher Johnston, St. Mary's road, East Wall, and Daniel Colgan, Russell avenue, Dublin, who were convicted by District Justice Molony in Dublin yesterday of the illegal possession of towels, value £7 odd, which were alleged to have been stolen from a Great Northern Railway wagon on April 30, were sentenced to three months' imprisonment, not to take effect on their entering into a bond, with independent bail of £20, for three years.

NATIONAL HEALTH INSURANCE

The annual meeting of representatives constituting the Insured Persons' (Local Authorities' Nominees) Members' Electorate to elect five members of the National Health Insurance Society was held yesterday in Arus Brugha, O'Connell street. The Most Rev. Dr. Dignan, Bishop of Clonfert, Chairman of the Committee of Management, presided.

The following representatives were elected:—

LEINSTER: Ralph James, 75 Leix road, Cabra, Dublin, and Michael Stafford, 1A Inchicore road, Kilmainham, Dublin. Sub.: Richard Power, Dublin street, Longford.

MUNSTER: Thos. Looney, Waterloo road, Blarney, Cork, and Joseph Cahill, Castle road, Tipperary. Sub.: Sean Horgan, 26 New street, Killarney.

CONNACHT AND ULSTER: Michael Gallagher, Lower James street, Westport, Co. Mayo. Sub: John Connors, Silevaine, Clarenbridge, Co. Galway.

ART EXHIBITION

A native gift for painting is evident in the work of Rolli Roland, whose exhibition at The Contemporary Picture Galleries was opened by Mr. Frank Hugh O'Donnell on Monday. The artist has an eye for a good subject, and, in a general way, he knows how it should be treated in the matter of composition, and his natural colour sense is pleasantly lively. Further, he has obviously looked at good pictures, and if influences are still perceptible in his work, they are excellent influences. All one has a right to ask during an artist's derivative phase is that he should choose to derive from good stock, and if here, in "Vigil," one is reminded of Jack B. Yeats, or in "Douce Vieillesse" of Grace Henry, so much the better.

It would, however, be a pity if he were to remain satisfied at having found a sympathetic human or literary approach, or let his feeling for vivacious effects of colour suffice as a substitute for atmospheric observation and expressive drawing. The flat strip of orange paint in "L'heure paisible," for instance, passes well enough as part of a vivid and pleasing colour scheme, but it is not by any stretch of imagination acceptable as a suggestion of the play of sunlight on a stretch of sand. Nor are the lower edges of clouds as summarily or as coarsely defined in nature as they are in "Aran Rhythm" and "Harvest." Similarly with the figures, in the details of draughtmanship they will not repay close examination. The original gift, nevertheless, remains, and it is abundantly clear that if Mr. Roland pursues his studies and researches further he is the makings of a lively and sympathetic artist.

Two Chapels

The Chapel Royal will be re-opened on Whit Sunday as a military church, and Mass will be celebrated in it for the first time in history. This information follows hard on the news that the church of the Hibernian Military School, in the Phœnix Park, had been renovated, and had been opened for worship according to the rites of the Church of Ireland. We think that the people of Ireland, Catholic and Protestant alike, will draw the necessary and desirable moral. Times have changed. It was inconceivable once that Mass should be celebrated in Dublin Castle; it was almost similarly inconceivable for twenty years that the little chapel of the Hibernian Military School should return to Protestant authority. Yet the unexpected—one almost might say, the incredible—has happened. It symbolises a complete change, not merely in Government, but in national, outlook. In a sense, the re-opening of these chapels is more "revolutionary" than the Constitution of 1937, and may have more effect upon the people's imagination. Let it be admitted that the majority of Irish voters had forgotten that the buildings ever existed—let alone the purpose to which they were devoted a quarter of a century ago; yet a great part of the same majority has forgotten the issues that were at stake in that Constitution. We could wish that the lesson might be learned. There was a time when the Chapel Royal was condemned as the spiritual centre, the essential symbol, of Dublin Castle, which, in its turn, symbolised the British rule in Ireland. More than twenty years after the fact the very symbol has disappeared; and simultaneously the sad memories of the same twenty years, during which Protestants were deemed the rearguard of "West Britonism" in Ireland, have been blurred, if not wiped out, by the appropriation of the Phœnix Park chapel to Protestant worship. Would that all memories had been wiped out in like manner! We commend the symbol to the attention of Mr. de Valera's Government, and to that of all Irish people who continue to live in the past. If a nation's homogeneity could be restored, or re-made, as easily as the decent evidences of the past, how much more hope could be placed in the national future!

In effect, the ceremonies—accomplished in the case of the Hibernian Military School chapel, anticipated in the case of the Chapel Royal—amount to an obliteration of memories. They ought to serve as an example for the obliteration of a few more. The average citizen of Ireland cares little or nothing for the recollection of those seven centuries on which his politicians still invite him to feed. Those seven centuries have been replaced by a new object of attention, and of hate—the evil days of twenty odd years ago. The same politicians who, at the elections of 1927 and 1931 and 1932, harked back to the past of 1919-1923, will be harking back to it in the election that is threatened for next month. That recall of the past is bad and immoral; it is also ineffective. We would direct the attention of all candidates for the forthcoming election, and of all who propose to speak at the hustings, to certain points which most of them have forgotten. Tens of thousands of the electors have no personal or intense recollection of the struggle between Ireland and Great Britain; even more remember nothing of the conflict between Staters" and "Republicans." Men and women who are on the register now, and will be expected to record their votes when, and if, the election occurs, were little more than children when the present Constitution of Ireland was enacted five years ago, and inquiry shows that even now they entertain a profound ignorance of the change which that Constitution created, or professed to create. Some sense of reality was shown in the conversion and restoration of the two chapels. None, unfortunately, has been disclosed in the attitude of our statesmen towards the wider problems of the nation. Like the Bourbons, they have learned nothing and have forgotten nothing. They have done intelligent things—but not enough of them, and almost, as it were, by accident. They have made no real effort to bridge either the gulf of seven hundred years, or the even more dangerous gulf of twenty. Heaven sent them a chance in the form of a world war; but the people who might have taken advantage of it have failed. Is it yet too late to apply the lesson of the two chapels?

Court Cards

In London recently an appeal against a conviction for unlawful gaming in a club was allowed by the Court of Criminal Appeal. The game was poker; but the decision is not as complete a victory for poker players as it seems. By the gaming statutes, it is illegal to play cards for money in a club or such place unless the game is one of mere skill. The conviction was made upon the declaration of the Chairman of the Sessions that poker was not a game of pure skill; but, in quashing the judgment, the appeal judge has not maintained that this declaration was incorrect. He has agreed, simply, that the question is one of fact and not of law, and that it should have been left to the jury to decide whether or not poker was a game of pure skill. It is not enough, apparently, as in the case of automatic machines, that skill should predominate over chance. The element of chance must be so slight as to render the game one which can properly be said to be a game of mere skill." Probably any man who "drinks and smokes and plays at cairts" would maintain stoutly that poker satisfies this condition. After all, he would argue, only skill can teach a man how to know the value of his own hand and estimate the value of the others, how to bluff his opponents and avoid being taken in by them, how to preserve, in all the rigours of the game, that invaluably rigid countenance known as a "poker-face." Only skill, he would point out, could have won him the tidy sum which he pocketed the other evening. Taken upon a less happy occasion, however, he might be disposed to make concessions. What but chance (in honest company, at least) governs the dealing and the drawing of the cards, the allotment of anything up to four aces to one player and a mixed bag of small cards to another? What but the sheerest luck, he will demand, could have caused him to fill a "full house," and then to be pillaged by an inferior player who happened to hold a straight flush? If the jury had been called upon to decide whether the game was, in fact, one of mere skill or not, and Exhibit A—the pack of cards—produced, the case would have taken on intolerable complications; for what is the law governing the playing of poker in a law court?

MUSICAL ART SOCIETY CONCERT

It was a well deserved tribute to the Musical Art Society to find such a large audience at their concert in the Aberdeen Hall, Gresham Hotel, Dublin, last night. Outstanding feature was the playing of the big Piano Concerto in D minor of Sebastian Bach, with Claud Biggs as soloist. Once again he impressed his hearers as an exponent of Bach. His reading of the work was an object lesson, and it was a sheer delight to note his wonderful sense of rhythm and the beautiful clarity of the fingering. Signor Grossi, who conducted, gave him grand support from his strings, making the performance notable. Later Mr. Biggs played with vivacity and charm the familiar Scarlatti Allegro in C, and two Chopin Studies. There was some very enjoyable singing by Alice B. Gerrity in two groups of songs, which included the Handel aria "As when the dove," from Acis and Galatea, and Haydn's lovely song, "My mother bids me bind my hair," both well sung. She was happy, too in the Mozart Lullaby, "The Trout," by Schubert; Roger Quilter's "Over the mountains," and Dr. Larchet's "Padraic the Fiddler," Noel Jameson providing a violin obbligato in the last-named —a neat touch.

From the String Orchestra, admirably led by Mrs. Harding, there was some fine work, especially in the always fresh "Eine Kleine Nacht Musik" of Mozart, and in the Elgar Serenade for Strings—the Larghetto section of which was especially rich in string tone.

Other orchestral pieces included Geminiani's Concerto Gresso, Intermezzi from "Orfeo" by the 16th century composer, Monteverdi, and Theme and four variations by Russian composers, all attractively played.

SPECIAL RATION FOR CHILDREN

The Department of Supplies is considering a suggestion put up by the Dublin Housewives' Committee and the Emergency Conference of Women's Societies that a special scheme of rationing for children would be put into operation.

A deputation from these bodies was received by Mr. Shanagher, the Assistant Secretary of the Department of Supplies, yesterday, and, after hearing the suggestion put forward, it was decided that a further discussion on the matter would take place next week.

General Seiji Moriya, who acted as Japanese Military Attaché to General Franco during the Spanish Civil War, was killed in action on May 20, says a Tokyo despatch.—(Reuter.)

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

DUBLIN AND BELFAST

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.
SIR,—An article which you published on Friday last, under the heading "Considerable Differences in Commodity Prices in Dublin and Belfast," seems to have occasioned considerable surprise in Belfast. At any rate, it has evoked a letter to me from one of my friends there in the following terms:—

"I have been a regular reader of the Irish Times for many years. I have gone so far as to recommend it to my friends as a fair journal. I am amazed, however, at the prices at which its reporter on Friday last suggested goods are to be bought here in Belfast. No doubt, the figures mentioned are well guarded by explanations and limitations. These, however, are just a smoke-screen to conceal the fact that the articles mentioned are more often than not quite unobtainable here. Taking the articles mentioned by the Times, here is the position as I and everyone else living here know it:

"New potatoes—We have none, because they are not for sale.

"Old potatoes cost 11d. per stone, not 6½d., as the Times reporter states.

"Cabbages here are like the roses, they can be called by any other name, and they will smell. Buy them at 8d. if you can, happy man!

"Young pamphrey, which the reporter says are sold at 1d. each, will be hard to purchase under 3d.

"The Irish Times says lettuce is sold here at 6d. each—how many varieties I don't know, but don't give me a dying one at any price.

"Radishes don't immediately concern me or most of the working population in Belfast, but what matters is 'the staff of life.' The Irish Times man does not mention the fact that flour is rationed on 1939 basis, nor the fact that Belfast people queue up for bread, nor that we have no fresh cream cakes, but austerity cakes. We may be lucky to get 2 ozs. of sweets per week.

"As to fish—some days one can get it and many days not.

"Salmon is controlled at 5s. 6d. per pound, so why state no price?—the explanation may be that there is a higher bidder in that market which is only open here to the war profiteer—the black marketer.

"The Irish Times man has performed a miracle—he has bought herrings at 7½d. per lb. The rest of the Belfast population is singing Herrings alive alive O—where do they go?

"Lamb—Did the Times reporter purchase lamb?—I understand it's not for sale. I would be glad, if he is so well-informed, that he might advise me where to buy my 7d. worth per week. I know quite well that this cuts out my beef rationing. I also know the number of cattle killed here in Belfast last week was 975, against 1,700 in an average week. I am informed that no beef is available, of any kind, under 1s. 2d. per lb.

"Why is there the week-end exodus from the North to Dublin if all the things the Irish Times man priced are to be had so reasonably here? Why do we hard-headed Belfast people spend so much on travelling expenses just to have one good meal in Dublin, and why do we go to so much trouble carrying parcels of foodstuffs home, when the Irish Times can get us all these things here at our doors?

"Of course, though we don't have much meat, we have lots of points; points for prunes, points for peas, points for porridge—and now the Irish Times man has discovered we have points for political propaganda as well.

"A last word. I notice Mr. McGilligan says that your £ is worth 11s. What Mr. McGilligan is trying to say I don't know. I should have thought your £ was worth 20s., at least if you can get twenty shillings for it—and a lot to eat for it, if you like to spend it that way. But what does Mr. McGilligan think the £ is worth in Belfast, where you might as well light your pipe with pound notes as try to buy more than 1lb. of even the coarsest meat per week, or to get more than four eggs?"

Perhaps, in view of the importance of this matter, you would see your way to allow your readers to reconsider your article in the light of my correspondent's comments upon it.—Yours, etc.,
SEAN MACENTEE.

HOSPITAL BEDS

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.
SIR,—In the Dublin evening papers of the 24th inst. the account of proceedings at an inquest in Enniskerry is misleading.

Dr. Kevin Hickey is reported to have "added that when he tried to get the other girl removed to a Dublin hospital he was refused admittance to St. Michael's Hospital, Dun Laoghaire, and from there he rang up the Bed Bureau in Dublin, but could not secure a bed for his patient."

A minute investigation of the circumstances confronting the R.M.O. on duty when Dr. Hickey came to this hospital reveals certain data which amplify, and certainly modify in a very important perspective, the effects produced by the testimony of the medical witness.

On the 22nd inst. Dr. Hickey is stated to have asked for a bed in St. Michael's Hospital. He was told that there was no vacancy, and was referred to the Bed Bureau. Then the R.M.O. on duty at this hospital—not Dr. Hickey—got into touch immediately with the Bed Bureau. He was informed they had not a bed for disposal. At once, without any hesitation, arrangements were made for the admission of Dr. Hickey's patient. Incidentally, these were effected by placing another patient on a stretcher. Dr. Hickey's own personal knowledge of the circumstances might have been expected to evoke from him at least some small appreciation of the efforts of the medical staff here, who so expeditiously did everything possible on the occasion.

If Dr. Hickey is under the illusion that the admission of the injured girl was secured "only as a great compliment to himself," may I assert that, while the policy of this hospital is essentially and primarily devoted to the desire to alleviate the sufferings of the sick or injured, it does not favour any particular medical practitioners, whose difficulties receive equal and unbiassed sympathy from the hospital administration?

As one with some detailed knowledge of the routine of St. Michael's Hospital I can state that Dr. Hickey's extern association with the professional life of the hospital appears to be limited to the one and only sad occasion which afforded him the opportunity of enunciating his helpful, constructive and experienced criticism of hospitalisation in Dublin.

Apart from Dr. Hickey's evidence, the juxta-position of the sentences in the Press reports would seem to indicate untruly—judging from the several messages received here—that Dr. Hickey was refused water (at this hospital) to wash his hands. Newspapers could be a little more careful in recording facts. The post-mortem examination on the deceased was performed at Enniskerry.—Yours, etc.,
J. P. BERNHAM,
Hon. Sec., Medical Board.
